

Beyond Theatre: A playback theatre memoir

Beyond Theatre: A playback theatre memoir, by founder Jonathan Fox, tells Jonathan's personal story of the background and evolution of playback theatre, with chapters about his childhood in New York City and formative experiences as a young man in Nepal and New Zealand. He describes the emergence of the playback theatre vision, and how playback grew from its beginnings with the original company to its current worldwide presence. It is a story of struggle as well as discovery and deep satisfaction: the often-unsuccessful effort to find acceptance and support for a new form of theatre that transcended familiar categories.
