

Le Suicide (Livre II) (GF-Dossier) (French Edition)

Pourquoi les femmes se suicident-elles moins que les hommes ? Les célibataires, plus que les gens mariés ? Les personnes âgées, plus que les jeunes ? Pourquoi, contrairement à une idée reçue, choisit-on de mourir à la belle saison plutôt qu'en hiver ? C'est à ces questions et à quelques autres que tente de répondre Le Suicide (1897), monument de la littérature sociologique, et plus particulièrement le livre II, au cours duquel Durkheim établit une typologie restée célèbre, distinguant les formes de suicides : égoïste, altruiste, anémique ou fataliste. Plus encore que l'étude d'un phénomène social, Le Suicide est avant tout la mise en application de principes essentiels tirés de la méthode expérimentale. Utilisant de façon exemplaire l'outil statistique, Durkheim y jette les bases de la science du social.
