

The Sex Education of M.E.

Im forty, flabby, and frustrated. Dont get me wrong, I have a good home, a decent job, and great children. I had a loving marriage for twenty years where we had our ups and downs. It wasnt perfect; but it wasnt awful. Then he died. After the grief took its course, and the reality of my life set in, I grew frustrated. It wasnt the bills or the struggle to keep my interest in my work. It was life without a man the only man Id been with for twenty years. And before you go all feminist on me, it isnt that I cant be an independent woman, but there are certain areas where a man is necessary. You need a f*ck buddy, my friend said. I didnt even know what that meant. Is it friends with benefits?, I asked. Better, you dont even have to be friends, she offered. Boy, did I need an education in the modern workings of dating, and sex. ++++++ A coming-of-an-older age novel. Something new from L.B. Dunbar -- a stand alone story!
