

The Head Of His House

an excerpt from the beginning: I HAVE often wondered whether good old Tim, who did what he did, was sanctioned by God as head of the house of Mast. Tim had always been my ideal head of a house. Kindly, humble, lovable, quaint, dependable as daylight he ruled over his little twenty-foot-front kingdom with a rule that I, a neighbour boy, or any one else, never felt was there until we committed some crime against it, broke one of his rose bushes or tormented the alley cat. And then Tims calling us to account was so frank and gentle that it made every boy of us in the square love him like a father. His wife was queen of his little kingdom. When she was on the front porch I never saw him come up the sidewalk without lifting his hat to her with an elaborate sweep and with a twinkle in his eye. As a rule he would pause gravely ten feet away and absurdly ask some respectful question in a solicitous voice perfectly audible to the neighbours for several doors. One time I remember it was, Beg pardon, but do you think the lady of the house would give me boarding here? It seems I can still hear Mrs. Tim repeating to my mother: Oh, Mrs. Connor. Its the pleasantest husband in the world I have. Often to-day I still see her and Tim rocking disconsolately on their front porch in the throes of the grippe. As if it were yesterday I can hear the old ladys half-sobbed words: Oh, Tim, nothing tastes good to me any more. And I can still see old Tim shake his head and hear him sadly say: No use, Lyddy. The sun doesnt shine any more. They had never had children of their own. That, I think, was the greatest cross that Tim had to bear. But he carried it bravely. In his and Mrs. Tims old age they took a nameless baby from their church orphanage and gave it the name of Mast and the first name of Shirk after Mrs. Masts family. And now as the son grew up I saw the first evidence that some day there was going to be a question of whether Tim would always be the head of his house. Tim was a well-read man, devouring newspapers, books and magazines, saving drawers full of clippings that he never had time to read again. But Shirk came from different blood. At the age of sixteen he clamoured to stop school. Through one of his companions, he secured a job as call boy for the railroad, and he offered six dollars a week to Tim just when Mrs. Tim after a long, hard illness had died. Tim had doctor bills and nurse bills and undertaking bills and very little money and nothing more than a rented house. But, although it was only another cross, he gave way to the boy and did not force him back to school. Tim, Tim, I muttered to myself. You must watch yourself if you want to stay the head of your house.
